

9. Bull...

- Help...
- In...
- Cou...
- End...
- Edu...
- Org...
- Edu...

10. Cre...

- Ecc...
- Stat...
- Sp...
- Sp...
- Ecc...
- That...
- Up...

About I...

Found... broad...
 peopl...
 bright...
 is a fi...

For more...

For more...

1. Engage with

- Find support groups for undocumented students on campus or online. These groups can provide a safe space for you to share your experiences and challenges. You don't have to go through this alone.
- Connect with other undocumented students. You can find them through social media, campus organizations, or community groups. It's important to know you're not alone.
- Seek out mentors. These can be faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide guidance and support.

2. Create a safe

- Identify safe spaces on campus. These could be libraries, student centers, or specific classrooms. Make sure you know where you can go if you need help.
- Keep your resources organized. Create a folder or binder for important documents, forms, and contact information. This will make it easier to find what you need when you need it.
- Document your experiences. Keep a journal or blog to record your thoughts, feelings, and challenges. This can be helpful for processing your experiences and for seeking support.
- Develop a support network. Reach out to friends, family, and community members. Let them know you need support and what that support looks like for you.
- Advocate for yourself. Don't be afraid to speak up if you feel you're being treated unfairly or if your needs aren't being met.

3. Learn about

- Understand your rights. Learn about federal, state, and local laws that affect undocumented students. This includes information on DACA, TPS, and other immigration statuses.
- Understand your school's policies. Read the student handbook and other school documents to know your rights and responsibilities. Make sure you understand the school's policies on immigration and student support.
- Stay up-to-date on immigration news. Follow reputable news sources and immigration organizations. This will help you stay informed about changes in immigration law and policy.
- Research local organizations. Find out about local organizations that provide support and resources for undocumented students. These organizations can offer legal assistance, financial aid, and other services.
- Keep informed about legislative changes. Stay up-to-date on proposed and enacted legislation that affects undocumented students. This will help you understand how these changes might impact you.

4. Financial & Academic

- Keep track of your academic progress. Monitor your grades and make sure you're on track to graduate. This will help you stay motivated and focused on your goals.
- Advocate for yourself. Don't be afraid to speak up if you feel you're being treated unfairly or if your needs aren't being met. This includes advocating for yourself in the classroom, on campus, and in the community.
- Find financial aid opportunities. Look for scholarships, grants, and other financial aid opportunities that are available to undocumented students. Many organizations and schools offer these opportunities.
- Consider your options. Think about your long-term goals and how you can achieve them. This includes considering your career options, graduate school, and other opportunities.
- Stay motivated. Remember why you started college and stay focused on your goals. This will help you overcome challenges and achieve success.

5.

- Find a mentor. A mentor can provide guidance and support, especially in navigating the college process. Look for faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide advice and encouragement.
- Connect with other undocumented students. You can find them through social media, campus organizations, or community groups. It's important to know you're not alone.
- Seek out mentors. These can be faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide guidance and support.
- Develop a support network. Reach out to friends, family, and community members. Let them know you need support and what that support looks like for you.
- Advocate for yourself. Don't be afraid to speak up if you feel you're being treated unfairly or if your needs aren't being met.

6.

- Understand your rights. Learn about federal, state, and local laws that affect undocumented students. This includes information on DACA, TPS, and other immigration statuses.
- Understand your school's policies. Read the student handbook and other school documents to know your rights and responsibilities. Make sure you understand the school's policies on immigration and student support.
- Stay up-to-date on immigration news. Follow reputable news sources and immigration organizations. This will help you stay informed about changes in immigration law and policy.
- Research local organizations. Find out about local organizations that provide support and resources for undocumented students. These organizations can offer legal assistance, financial aid, and other services.
- Keep informed about legislative changes. Stay up-to-date on proposed and enacted legislation that affects undocumented students. This will help you understand how these changes might impact you.

7.

- Find a mentor. A mentor can provide guidance and support, especially in navigating the college process. Look for faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide advice and encouragement.
- Connect with other undocumented students. You can find them through social media, campus organizations, or community groups. It's important to know you're not alone.
- Seek out mentors. These can be faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide guidance and support.
- Develop a support network. Reach out to friends, family, and community members. Let them know you need support and what that support looks like for you.
- Advocate for yourself. Don't be afraid to speak up if you feel you're being treated unfairly or if your needs aren't being met.

8.

- Find a mentor. A mentor can provide guidance and support, especially in navigating the college process. Look for faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide advice and encouragement.
- Connect with other undocumented students. You can find them through social media, campus organizations, or community groups. It's important to know you're not alone.
- Seek out mentors. These can be faculty members, staff, or older students who can provide guidance and support.
- Develop a support network. Reach out to friends, family, and community members. Let them know you need support and what that support looks like for you.
- Advocate for yourself. Don't be afraid to speak up if you feel you're being treated unfairly or if your needs aren't being met.